Ooh La La Contemporary French

The French phrase oh là là isn't so much an expression as an interjection. It can indicate surprise, disappointment, commiseration, distress, or annoyance. The phrase is used to express any moderately strong reaction to something that was just said or done, for example: Oh là là !

Using the French Expression 'Oh là là'

[o la la] Usage notes: English speakers probably say it more than anyone, but oh là là is still a classic French phrase / exclamation used to express a fairly strong reaction, whether good or bad: excitement, surprise, disappointment, etc.

If you ask the average person what they can say in French, there's a good chance they'll tell you " Oh là là". It's a phrase that's even more iconic and well-known than Voulez-vous coucher avec moi ce soir ?. Unlike that phrase, though, French people actually do say Oh là là - a lot!

Why the French really say Oh là là (and how to use it ...

No, French people don't say "ooh la la." I have never ever heard a French person say it. I have never ever heard a French person say it. What you may hear from a French person is " oh la la! " (with an "Oh" and not an "Ooh"), except that this expression implies very different things, both in terms of meaning, context and impressions it gives.

Do French people really use the expression "Ooh La La"?

Ooh, La, La, C'est Magnifique by Bob Brooke . French clockmaking came into its own in the 17th century, when highly ornamented clocks covered in gilt bronze, known as ormolu, were produced to keep pace with the new standards for opulence set by King Louis XIV's Palace of Versailles.

"Ooh La La" is a 1973 song by the band Faces, written by Ronnie Lane and Ronnie Wood. It was the title song for the band's last studio album, titled Ooh La La.. The lead vocals were provided by Wood, a rarity in the band's catalog as lead vocals were usually performed by Rod Stewart and less often by Ronnie Lane. Stewart and Lane both recorded lead vocals for the song but neither were ...
