Poetry in the Making is a great book, suitable for people who have realized that poetry making is an activism, good for expressing problems in words, to allow the problems to be begun to be understood by the mind of the occupant of the body whose mind is attached, and any other readers.

Poetry in the Making: An Anthology by Ted Hughes

Drawn from Ted Hughes's celebrated programs for the BBC's "Listening and Writing" series, Poetry in the Making is a fresh, student-friendly discussion of what Hughes calls "imaginative writing." Offering generous citations from the work of several English-speaking, mostly modern or contemporary poets—including Hopkins, Dickinson, Eliot, Larkin, Plath, and himself—Hughes provides a useful and readable primer on "the kind of [poetry] writing children can do without becoming false to themselves."

Poetry in the Making (London: Faber and Faber, 1967) Andy Armitage writes about Hughes's 'anthology' of creative writing. Poetry in the Making (1967) began as a series of 'talks' that Hughes wrote, and read, for the BBC Schools Broadcasting radio series Listening and Writing [1]. He expanded upon these talks and supplemented them with 'teacher notes' and 'exercises' so that the printed book could be used as a classroom resource; as a teacher's handbook and an anthology of poems.
